MyProjects launches to support key industry need

The company behind two of the industry's leading online specification tools, Productspec and Smartspec, has launched another game-changing platform for builders, architects, designers and anyone who manages construction sector projects.

Developed in response to the industry's need for a better way to file and share project information, MyProjects allows building professionals to securely store and archive project files, share this information with project stakeholders, and maintain a library of frequently used products that's always up-to-date.

MyProjects connects directly to Productspec, Australasia's most comprehensive product, BIM and CAD library, and Smartspec, one of the industry's leading spec-writing tools; however it's freely available to anyone working in the construction sector, regardless of the specification platform or operating system they use.

Productspec + Smartspec General Manager, Ian Watt, says, "It's great to be able to deliver a free platform that addresses a key industry need. Anyone who works in the industry appreciates how hard it is to manage the host of product information and technical files involved with construction projects. The fact you can securely store all of this information in the one place, and easily share it with project stakeholders, is hugely beneficial."

One of the unique features of MyProjects is that users are able to maintain a library of frequently used product information that can be quickly and easily accessed and added to projects. Where this information is sourced from Productspec it's automatically kept up-to-date, which is vital in reducing risk.

Stored on the cloud, MyProjects is completely safe and secure. Files cannot be compromised, there's no risk of losing project information and archived files can be accessed at any time. The platform is also free to use.

Specifiers can try MyProjects at myprojects.co.nz.
